VITICULTURE

The Miño valleys unique climate and soils allow the cultivation of a range of different premium grape varieties and production of quality grapes. Varieties such as Loureiro and Treixadura are more sensitive to the challenges posed by the climate than the widely planted Albariño, yet are important indigenous varieties in the region.

Bodegas La Val is committed to producing a modern style, high quality, multi-varietal wine. Loureiro and Treixadura grapes are grown in our Porto vineyard, in the heart of El Condado.

WINEMAKING

The harvest began at the end of September, with grapes are manually picked into 20 kg cases. Destalked grapes are macerated for 6 hours at 8° C. The must is pressed and immediately racked. Fermentation takes place in stainless steel tanks for approximately 3 weeks at low temperatures to preserve the characteristic aromas. Must from different varieties are fermented separately and later the final blend is determined by tasting.

TASTING NOTES

Yellow straw colour with greenish hues, very bright. On the nose the wine has medium-high intensity with floral and fruity notes and fresh herbs. Citrus and creamy aromas typical of Albariño, combine with green apple characters from Treixadura; with herb, balsamic and gently smoky notes from the aromatic Loureiro. On the palate the wine is fresh and balanced, with well integrates acidity and full fruity flavours. Minerality and zesty citrus notes on the finish cleanse the palate... ready for the next sip.

SOMMELIER RECOMMENDATIONS
